ADMISSION

For the Design study program (taught in English) at the Faculty of Design, admission to the first year for the academic year 2024/2025 will be based on a single test to assess the candidate's skills and creativity

For the July/September 2025 session, the admission process will take place in a hybrid system — both in person and online for the practical tests.

The admission competition is organized by specializations/study programs and will take place in three stages:

Stage I – Preliminary test (portfolio of works):

The preliminary practical test will be graded as PASS/FAIL.

Stage II – Admission exam (admission portfolio):

Stage III – Motivational interview.

The two components — the portfolio of works and the admission portfolio — will be submitted online to the faculty's email address and presented during an interview with the admission committee.

Details about the contents of the Portfolio of Works and the Admission Portfolio:

Portfolio of Works:

Must include a selection of minimum 10 and maximum 20 works that the candidate considers representative of their personality.

The purpose of this preliminary PASS/FAIL test is to assess the candidate's aptitude and creativity in the field of visual arts.

The selected works must be presented to the committee online in PDF format, with one work per page. The email address and the submission period will be specified later.

Admission Portfolio:

Must include 4 works on themes proposed by the admission committee but relevant to the candidate's interests

Candidates will be required to create, based on the committee's instructions:

one drawing study, one color study, two creative projects on a theme proposed by the committee

The format of the works must be 35x50 cm on drawing paper. In evaluating the admission portfolio, the following criteria will be considered: spatial perception, sense of proportion, 2D/3D form imagining and representation, color sense, execution ability, knowledge of representation techniques

The works must be presented online in PDF format. The email address and submission period will be announced later.

The Admission Portfolio and the Portfolio of Works will also be presented in front of the committee on the scheduled date of the motivational interview.

The final grade will be the arithmetic average of the projects and studies presented, without taking into account the high school graduation (baccalaureate) grades.

Notes:

Digital techniques, collage, or photography are not allowed for works in the admission portfolio.

Notes:

Digital techniques, collage, or photography are not allowed for works in the admission portfolio.

Candidates who are admitted are required to present the original version(s) of their portfolio work(s) when registering. Failure to do so will result in disqualification, and their place will be declared vacant.

For the aptitude tests, candidates must provide their own materials (paper, cardboard, pencil, charcoal, watercolor, tempera, gouache, acrylics, etc.).

All three admission stages (Stages 1, 2, and 3) will take place on a single day.

The faculty will organize two pre-admission sessions in the second semester, during which candidates will receive grades based on the admission methodology. A preparatory course consisting of three modules will also be organized, ending with a mock admission exam.
